Fall Boone Handmade Market November 21st at Turchin Center

Boone, NC— The Fall Boone Handmade Market will be held at the Turchin Center for the Visual Arts on November 21, 2010 from 1-5 p.m. This event is presented by the Arts Management Organization (AMO), an active Appalachian student club and is sponsored by the Turchin Center for the Visual Arts. Over 65 emerging and established artists of the High Country are planning to sell their locally homemade goods at this indoor arts market. These local artists will be selling everything handmade from delicious sweet treats to jewelry, sculpture, pottery, various arts and crafts and more. Buy locally and support your community while adding unique handmade gifts to your holiday shopping list!

After the immense success of the market's inaugural spring season, the Arts Management Organization wanted to continue to present this one-day market that would support local artists and their handmade goods that are prevalent in our area. This event, not only supports the High Country's local art scene, but acts as the club's main fundraiser to support similar art events that the club hosts on campus and around town. AMO is also planning a Spring Boone Handmade Market on Sunday, March 27, 2011. All vendors accept cash and checks and some vendors are able to accept credit cards.

AMO's Mission

The Arts Management Organization seeks to promote professionalism and networking within arts fields by increasing the awareness of the arts on Appalachian State University's campus and in the community. This organization is open to ASU students and community members inspired by the arts and other expressive forms. Members seek to enrich the knowledge and appreciation of the arts for all who are involved. The objectives of AMO are: to create an environment in which to learn and share professional practices; to enhance the lives of artists and students by promoting all forms of art within Appalachian State University and surrounding community by providing opportunities; to provide educational opportunities for participating students; and to create lasting partnerships with other campus organizations.
