A high-contrast, close-up profile of a person's head against a black background. The person has short, light-colored hair and is looking towards the right. A small, dark snake with yellow and black stripes is coiled around the person's ear and cheek, its head resting near the eye. Curatorial Statement

Exploring that which makes us most uncomfortable, Larassa Kabel explores the emotional and intellectual space between life and death, love and loss. Through drawing, painting, performance, and sculpture, she confronts our view of ourselves “outside of Nature” and our desire to distance ourselves from our mortality.

Artist's Statement

I am an interdisciplinary memento mori (“remember death”) artist. I believe that by factoring in the limits of our time on earth, we will be more aware of ourselves, the ways we spend our time, who we share our lives with, and how we treat others and our environment. I am interested in how mortality has been addressed on a micro and macro level over time and by various cultures.

I think and create at a walking pace. Every morning I walk at dawn, and with each stride I am reflecting and making connections between myself, my imagination, my community, and nature. My work is a form of maximalist minimalism: I try to frame simple, revelatory questions and then create complicated work that often requires careful observation, the long-term collection of materials, and high levels of skill to realize. Some of the projects even require coordination with the natural rhythms of the seasons. It is highly detailed and labor intensive, but I find the process of creating to be extremely meditative. I am happiest immersed in long term projects.

Artist's Statement

The work for Memento Mori: Death and the Art of Living is a combination of photos from my Death in the Family series and a site-specific installation inspired by being with my father-in-law when he died last year. His hallucinations changed his room into a menagerie of visiting animals and people who he alone could see. The idea of the death bed as a public and private space, one full of intense transition, personal symbols, memories, love, fear, and hope have been churning in my mind for almost a year. I am very excited to transform the gallery into a space that changes from personal to public depending on whether it is day or night.

Invitation to Reflect

Larassa Kabel's work offers us beautifully intricate images and sculptures which emerge from her walking meditations and performances and make connections between herself, her imagination, her community, and nature. Through this exhibition, we are invited to consider our own relationship with the cycles of life and the relationships we have with other beings. We are also encouraged to be mindful of the joyous moments we experience and to seek them often.

How might you use artmaking materials to honor yourself and the lives of the beings that are important to you?

How do the cycles of life and nature present themselves in your life?

In what ways do you celebrate the joy of life?
